The Business of Blood tells the true and thrilling story of Chris Cole who believed that when life and death are at stake, you just have to stand up and be daunted. In an exuberant and dynamic production, we witness the suspense-filled events of the night of January 6, 1993 when an ordinary man went to extraordinary lengths to insist that arms trading is not normal business and conscience is not a disposable item to be left at the door. The Business of Blood is a funny, passionate and bold theatrical experience. Not to be missed.

What the critics said about Calypso's last production Trickledown Town by Donal O'Kelly

'.....a dazzling, collaborative feat by writer, director and actors, which scarcely leaves the audience room to draw breath.'
